The case decided Monday arose from the fact that Patrick Collins and Tho-mas Malone, with other tobacco growers of Mason county, joined a tohacco pool and subsequently sold their to-bacco outside the pool without the consent of the pool agent. The two men were indicted under the pooling act, which permitted fines to be imposed upon those who violated the agreement intended to he validated thereby. Their cases differed only in that Collins took his tobacco to Cincinnati and sold it, while Malone sold his in Kentucky and did not therefore involve an interstate

Mt. Sterling Paper Out For Beckham The Mt. Sterling Advocate, one of the oldest and strongest Democratic papers in the Ninth Congressionat fistrict, and for twenty-five years a leader in its party affairs, comes out last week in a strong editorial supporting the candidacy of the Hon. J. C. W. Beckham for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator.

The support of this paper will be of reat henefit to Governor Beckham.
The announcement of the Advocate, which has always been considered against Governor Beckham, was a surnrise, and a hard blow to the reary and Stanley interests in that section of the State. The editorial of the Advocate it is as follows:

"For weeks we have made no effort to conceal our preference in the con-test for the Democratle nomination for United States Senator before the State primary, August 1 next. Ordina-rily, locause of party expediency, we refain from doing this. However, with have a most complete and attractive promism list. Wants Lower Price on School Books Efforts are being made to settle dif-ferences between State Superintendent lamltt and some other members of the State Textbook Commission over the contract price for Lyon and Carnahau's arithmetics recently adopted. The law specifies that the hooks shall be sold in Kentucky as low as in any other. State The Lyou and Carnahan arithmetics are adopted in Tennessee at 24 and 35 cents for two books. The same and 35 cents for two books. The same books with six additional pages in the elemental book and about 100, devoted to review and vocational problems, in the advanced book, are adopted in Kentucky at thirty and fifty cents, respectively. The firm in discussing the books before the board said the price could not be cut if the larger text was adopted. Superintendent Hamlett has asked an opinion from Assistant Attorney General Logan on the question. Superintendent Hamlett declares he will not sign the contract.

STOCK REDUCING SALES

This store's policy to show, at the beginning of the season, all that is new and desirable, in large variety, very often results in our having Too Many Goods at the end of the season. Fore-seeing that this will be true this summer we begin right in the midst of the season to offer you most desirable merchandise at low prices heretofore not attempted by this store or any other in Central Kentucky. We are willing for our reputation to stand or fall by the truthfulness of the statements made in this circular. Whether you buy much or little you can't afford to miss this opportunity to increase the purchasing power of your money.
